How to use your candle properly?

1 For a proper combustion

Place the candle on a flat and heat-resistant surface.

When using for the first time, let the candle burn for at least 3 to 4 hours until the entire surface of the wax has become liquid. This will prevent the wax from forming a well around the wick.

Never let the burning wick come into contact with the edge of the candle.

2 A properly- maintained wick

Make sure the wick is straight and centred when extinguishing the candle for an even consumption of the wax during future uses.

Never blow out the wick to extinguish the candle: dip the wick in the hot wax using a holder and then straighten it.

Before each use, make sure to cut the wick by 5 mm to promote optimal burning.

3 When it's time to say goodbye

When there are only 5 mm of wax left or when the wick's metal support shows, your candle is finished. You may then recycle it or find different uses for it.
